The Philippines

General Description

The Philippines, from its northernmost tip to its farthest island in the south, is an unmistakably beautiful country endowed with pristine beaches, bountiful lakes and serene lagoons, magnificent mountains and challenging volcanoes, pastoral country sides and exciting and highly developed cities and urban centers. Name it and the country has all that can lure even the most seasoned traveler. Most of all, it is home to a fascinatingly captivating people given to smile and renowned for their hospitality.

The underlying charm of the Philippines is its chain of 7,107 islands so beautiful they were once called the "Green Necklace of the Pacific." Bounded by the Pacific Ocean to the east, the South China Sea to the west, the Bash Channel to the north and the Sulu Sea and Celebes Sea to the south, the Philippines has a total land area of 300,780 square kilometers, with a coastline of 15,500 kilometers (twice that of the United States) where the most beautiful beaches in the world can be found. The country is divided into the geographic areas of Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao. Its capital, Manila, is in Luzon while the premier city of Cebu is in the Visayas and Davao City is in Mindanao.

Manila, the main entry point to the country, is a cosmopolitan and bustling metropolis that boasts of posh hotels, upscale shopping centers and entertainment venues that become rather stirring and full of life at night, amidst centers of arts and crafts, museums, historical landmarks, and centuries-old churches like the one considered to be the country's greatest link to its Hispanic past.

A little farther north of Manila, the cadence slows down a bit as the scenery changes from towering skyscrapers to the rugged terrain of a spent volcano with an awesome crater lake. Here, the aborigine Aetas now share their know-how in jungle survival with those who dare scale whatever is left of the revered mountain that was once their home. Farther still are the Cordillera Mountain Ranges, where lived the descendants of the Ifugao tribal folk who carved the breathtaking rice terraces out of the mountainside 2,000 years ago. The Ifugao and the rest of the mountain tribal folk continue their customs and traditions although modernization is fast catching up with the younger generations. On the plains, in the towns and villages bordered by beaches and the sea, centuries-old churches and historic landmarks built by the Spanish friars still stand, veritable substantiation of the almost 400 years of Spanish colonization.

Ancient churches and turn-of-the-century houses also mark Luzon's southern landscape of verdant fields, placid lakes, mighty rivers and either dormant or active volcanoes. Add to these the larger islands of Palawan and Mindoro, both boasting of natural parks now listed in the ASEAN's Greatest Parks. To many people, Palawan is the "Last Frontier" as many rare flora and fauna still inhabit its mountains, hinterlands.
The Philippines

and plains, islands and islets and its surrounding seas, making the island province a venue for daring sports adventures. Also in Palawan are the incomparable El Nido Archipelago and some of the most stunning island resorts where travelers can soak up the sun, sand and sea in luxury.

Pristine beaches, warm tropical waters and unique inland attractions also abound in Cebu, Bohol and other islands in Central Philippines where the people have something in common: the innate sense of festivity often based on combined religious and folk beliefs. A very good example of this is Ati-Atihan, the festival in honor of the Sto. Nino (Holy Child) and, while differing in name and fervor in execution (it's called Sinulog in Cebu and Dinagyang in Iloilo, Ati-Ati in Iloilo), the celebrations have the same passion and devotion very much like that seen during the procession of the revered image of the Black Nazarene in Quiapo, Manila.

For Filipinos, in general, fiestas (usually in honor of some patron saints) and festivals (either age-old traditions or ones created to showcase the town’s tourist attractions, cultural heritage, arts and crafts, agricultural products and the like such as the Panagbenga of Baguio City, Kadayawan of Davao City, Lanzones Festival of Camiguin, Hong Butuan of Butuan City, Kaamulan of Bukidnon, Maradjao Karadjao of Surigao, etc) are venues not only for homecoming and the gathering of family, relatives and friends but also as an opportunity to show the ultimate in hospitality as they open their homes to visitors and offer food and drinks to one and all, including foreigners present only by mere happenstance.

T'boli weavers, Davao

For its sheer size - it is the second largest in surface area in the country - and its abundant natural resources, Mindanao has been dubbed the “Land of Promise.” It is also a promising place for exciting travel, cultural and sports adventure with the opportunity to interact with the Muslims (Maranaws, Maguindanao, Tausugs, Yakan, Samal) and its indigenous peoples such as Manobos, Bagobos, Mandaya, Bukidnons, Talalaingis, B’laan, Subanons, Tirurays, T’bols and others, including the seafaring gypsies known as Badjaos. And there are more to see and experience like the region’s unique flora and fauna thriving in its virgin forests, mineral-rich mountain ranges and surrounding seas.

And there are the Filipinos who have the most unique racial mix in Asia: a complex intermingling of Malay, Spanish, German, British, Japanese and American. All these bloodlines produced the unique Filipino race and the cultures that melted into each other created a heritage of pagan and Christian, East and West, customs and traditions and language all their own. And, having been under Spanish colonization for almost 400 years and American domination for 50 years, the Filipino “thinks like an American, feels like a Spanish and behaves like a Malay.”

The Philippines is easily accessible by air as most of the world’s major airlines serve the international airports in Manila, Clark in Pampanga and Mactan in Cebu. Some major airlines in Asia also now serve the international airport in Davao City. Travel time is approximately five hours from Tokyo, less than two hours from Hong Kong, 17 hours from Los Angeles, and a little over 20 hours from London. It takes only one hour from Mánado, North Sulawesi in Indonesia to Davao City; only two hours from Kota Kinabalu in Sabah; three hours from Singapore, and one hour and a half from Palau, Micronesia.

It’s now time to come to the Philippines and embrace the beyond-the-usual offerings of its 7,107 islands!
General Description

Metro Manila — friendly, hospitable, warmly welcoming — is the principal gateway of the Philippines to its major destinations throughout its archipelago of 7,107 islands.

Metro Manila is an exciting, colorful and complex metropolis made up of 14 cities and 3 municipalities, namely, Manila, the capital of the Philippines at Kilometer Zero; Quezon City; Mandaluyong, San Juan, Pasig, Marikina in the East; Makati, Pasay, Parañaque, Las Piñas, Muntinlupa, Taguig, and Pateros in the South; and Caloocan, Malabon, Navotas, and Valenzuela in the North. All these cities—each with its own distinct character, history, and interesting features—occupy a total area of 633.3 square kilometers, bounded by the Manila Bay and the provinces of Bulacan, Rizal, Cavite and Laguna.

Metro Manila is the central nerve of all activities in the country, the seat of government, the center of trade and economic activities and the core of education, culture and arts and entertainment.

Metro Manila is a combination of different elements that define its character as a place:

Drama, as the metropolis, particularly the capital city of Manila, succeeds in making its historic past relevant to the present times.

Sights and sounds, as it is a blending of both ancient and modern edifices like skyscrapers and state-of-the-art shopping malls, of concrete and greenery, of stark settings and pockets of beautiful scenery, all surrounded by the cacophony of sounds of people of varied tongues, culture and beliefs, and of everything else moving around the cities.

Money and music, as it is an excellent place for business or work, to earn a living and then, at the end of the day, to relax and enjoy varied forms of entertainment, subdued or glitzy and fast, even raucous.

Lights and life, as the entire metropolis is brightly lit, cosmopolitan and fashionable, vibrant and alive, either in basic comfort or unimaginable luxury, beginning from dawn and ending at dawn.

Most of all, Metro Manila is the Philippines’ heart and soul.
Getting Around the Metropolis

Those who are new to the National Capital Region (NCR) may find Metro Manila’s transport system quite confusing. Taking the public transport notwithstanding is a very exciting experience because aside from getting to your destinations, it is a means of discovering the culture that is genuinely Filipino and truly Metro Manila.

There are various options one can take to get around NCR. People believe that traffic in the metropolis is so notorious but it is not as bad as everyone thinks it is. It is just a matter of good timing so it is advised that one must avoid the rush hours and instead go out during the odd hours from 10:00 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Visitors who prefer the convenience of private cars can avail of the services of rent-a-car establishments. Several companies provide these services but it is advised to hire those accredited by the Department of Tourism (DOT).

Several means of public transportation are available: taxis, buses, jeepneys, tricycles/pedicabs, and trains.

Taxis are the best means of transport around the metropolis. Airconditioned cabs roam the streets anytime of the day. Flag down rate is thirty pesos (P30.00) with an additional two pesos and fifty centavos (P2.50) for every 300 meters thereafter. Be cautious, however, of taxi drivers who ask for fixed rates. This practice is illegal and very much discouraged although it happens, particularly to destinations which are offbeat or too close. Passengers are reminded to pay only the amount stated in the meter.

DOT accredited taxis with metered rates and trained drivers are available as well from the international airport to any point of destination within Metro Manila.

In addition to the regular taxis are the popular mega-taxis commonly called FX, referring to the Toyota Tamaraw FX although, at present, Isuzu Highlanders, Toyota RevoS and Mitsubishi Adventures ply as mega-taxis as well. Unlike ordinary cabs, the FX have specific destinations and take only passengers along their routes. Drivers charge ten to thirty-five pesos (P10-P35) per passenger depending on the destination. Maximum capacity of the FX is ten passengers.

Commuters are inclined to take this transport mainly for convenience because the fare is more affordable compared to a regular taxi, it is more comfortable than a jeepney because it is airconditioned and is significantly more agile than a bus.

Buses, which are quite dependable, tread the major thoroughfares of Metro Manila. Various city bus companies provide the region with easy access to the different cities and municipalities. Regular and airconditioned buses service the public as early as 4:00 in the morning up to midnight, from north to south.

Provincial bus lines with terminals within NCR likewise link Metro Manila to the rest of the country.

The jeepney, as the undisputed king of the Philippine roads, is the basic means of transportation for most Filipinos. They jostle daily with the taxis and buses within the streets of Metro Manila.

Although the jeepney is not always convenient to take, fare is very inexpensive and riding one is always a fun and exciting experience. Jeepney drivers oftentimes amusement to their passengers as they skillfully maneuver.
these unique vehicles even on the busiest streets. Majority of the jeepneys coming from the different cities and municipalities of the Metropolis converge in Quiapo. Check signboards for your destinations before boarding a jeepney.

The best way to go on short distances is by motorized tricycles or pedal-powered pedicabs. Minimum fare is four pesos (P4.00) per passenger depending on the location and distance traveled.

The overhead train of the Light Rail Transit (LRT) offers a much faster alternative of commuting. It stretches from the City of Caloocan to Baclaran, Pasay City. Train intervals is a mere ten minutes and boarding and unloading stations are located at key areas of the metropolis. Train fare is ten pesos (P10).

Servicing the public as well is the Metrotren, the land railway transit operated by the Philippine National Railways (PNR). Minimum train fare is two pesos (P2.00) which goes all the way from Tayuman to Alabang with specific loading and unloading stations. Trains leave every 30 minutes starting from 5:00am to 5:00pm.

To address the escalating traffic situation in the region, the government and the private sector have joined hands in providing a more convenient system of transportation and making all its cities and municipalities more accessible via the Metro Rail Transit (MRT).

- LRT 1 covers Parañaque, Pasay, Manila and Caloocan
- LRT 2 covers Quezon City and Manila
- MRT covers Pasay City, Makati, Mandaluyong and Quezon City

The existing urban rail network (LRT 1, 2, 3) will likewise be extended to the adjacent provinces of Rizal, Cavite, Laguna and Bulacan (LRT 4, North Rail).
Tourist Attractions

BACLARAN REDEMPTORIST CHURCH
Baclaran, Paranaque
The National Shrine of Our Mother of Perpetual Help is visited by thousands of devotees each Wednesday at the Badarlan Church which is considered to be “the most attended church in Asia”. Run by the Redemptorist Fathers, it has become a Mecca for Christian pilgrims from all over the world. It is believed that novena devotion at the shrine results in the granting of the devotees petitions.

BAYWALK
Roxas Boulevard, Manila
Foreign and local tourists wishing a whiff of sea breeze may promenade between the Manila Bay seawall and numerous alfresco restaurants. It is a strategic spot to view the world famous Manila Bay sunset and its vibrant colors that continue to be accentuated in the evening by the colorful streetlights stretched along the entire 2 kilometer promenade from the American Embassy compound to the Cultural Center of the Philippines complex.

BEST BARGAINS
Greenhills, Chinatown and Divisoria
When locals want a good buy, they go all the way to Divisoria or Chinatown in Manila. Others who avoid the crowd or prefer better shopping conditions settle for the Greenhills Shopping Center in San Juan. Name it, these places have it. From knick-knacks, to the latest gadgets, garments, and antiques --- there is always a bargain waiting to be discovered.

CBD ENTERTAINMENT AND SHOPPING
Central Business Districts (CBD)
Mixed-used. Mixed pleasures --- best describe the entertainment and shopping havens of Makati and Ortigas Center. A place to see and be seen, the high-end Ayala Center in Makati (Glorietta and Greenbelt) is frequented by the country’s expatriate community, the local elite, and employees of the premier business district for its themed restaurants, fastfood chains, glitzy bars, designer boutiques and first-class entertainment. In the crossroads of Mandaluyong, Pasig, San Juan and Quezon City is Ortigas Center, home of the Asian Development Bank (ADB) and San Miguel Corporation (SMC) headquarters. Several malls like SM Megamall, The Podium, Robinsons Galleria, Shangri-La Plaza, Starmall, St. Francis Square, and Edsa Central cater to the employees of this CBD which has a market mix similar to Makati. There are others like The Fort in Taguig, Festival Mall and Alabang Town Center in Muntinlupa, Eastwood City in Libis, Quezon City, and the Araneta Center in Cubao, Quezon City that attract those in the periphery of these main CBDs.

COLLEGE EDUCATION / ESL CENTERS
Metro Manila continues to be a favored destination of Asian students not only for their college education which lasts several years but also as a place for them to learn English as a Second Language (ESL) in a month’s time. They find it inexpensive and find great value in immersing themselves in the local culture. This trend is expected to continue and increase substantially as the global village gains acceptance and more Asians realize the importance of knowledge and English as a means to further oneself in a highly competitive global environment.

CULTURAL CENTER OF THE PHILIPPINES (CCP) COMPLEX
Roxas Boulevard, Pasay City

The vision of the Cultural Center of the Philippines (CCP) Complex as the mecca for culture and arts in Asia is underway and is expected to be completed by 2013. This 60-hectare development, built on reclaimed land by the bay, is the country’s preeminent venue for cultural shows, concerts, conventions and exhibits and has played host to several of the world’s finest artists and performers. The Cultural Center of the Philippines (CCP), the Folk Arts Theater (FAT), the Philippine International Convention Center (PICC), the Coconut Palace, and the Sofitel Philippine Plaza Manila are situated in this vast complex. A recent attraction that draws in both tourists and locals to its popular bars and restaurants is the Harbor Square.

GAWAD KALINGA COMMUNITIES
Gawad Kalinga, 349 Ortigas Avenue near EDSA
Tel. No. (63-02) 7267261
Website: www.gawadkalinga.org

Strewn all over the metropolis and the entire country are social and spiritual oases of hope and concern for fellowmen known as the Gawad Kalinga Villages. Through the years, Gawad Kalinga has shown how the poorest of the poor, some of whom had never had the chance in their lives, can rise above hopelessness and helplessness. By giving land to the landless and home to the homeless, Gawad Kalinga aims to restore the dignity of the poor and his capacity to dream and the motivation to work for that dream. Gawad Kalinga is becoming a global template for development and has grown to represent the Philippines’ next gift to humanity. Community organizers, social workers and politicians from other countries visit via self-initiated study tours and replicate GK villages in Papua New Guinea, Indonesia and Cambodia; and soon in East Timor, India, Nigeria and Nicaragua. There are also foreigners who have left the comforts of home to immerse themselves deeply into this life-changing advocacy to make one’s home a better place to live in. GK volunteers are the Peace Corps of our times and their number has grown to over 200,000 active volunteers. The 1,000 GK communities all over the country directly affect the lives of half a million poor Filipinos regardless of location or religious creed.
INTRAMUROS – THE WALLED CITY

Manila

Walk back in time to the old Spanish era when you visit the walled city of Intramuros and take in vestiges of more than 300 years of Spanish colonial rule --- massive high stone walls, bulwarks, moats and cobblestoned streets. Originally the site of a large Malayan Muslim settlement called Maynila, headed by Rajah Sulayman, Intramuros, literally meaning “within the walls”, was the glorious old city of Manila. It was built by the Spaniards in the 16th century as a defense against foreign invaders. The walls of the city fortress stretched 4.5 kms. and encircled 64 hectares where residences, churches, schools, government buildings, and drawbridges as gates were erected. Subsequent fires, earthquakes and World War II bombings left it in ruins sparing only some walls and buildings. Restoration and preservation programs help revive the illustrious past of Intramuros.

Located at the northwestern tip of Intramuros is Fort Santiago, one of the fortifications started in 1571 and completed nearly 150 years later by Filipino forced labor. What once served as the headquarters of the Spanish forces is now known as the “Shrine of Freedom”, in memory of the heroic Filipinos imprisoned and killed here during the Spanish and Japanese era. A museum with memorabilia and antique furniture honors the country’s national hero, Jose P. Rizal, who spent his last few days here before he was executed on December 30, 1896. A resident theater company, PETA, uses ramparts, an old garrison and a small chapel as theaters for both traditional and modern plays.

Nearby are the Manila Cathedral and the San Agustin Church and Museum. The Manila Cathedral is a minor basilica dedicated to the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary. It has an imposing Romanesque structure made entirely out of Philippine adobe, main doors made of bronze with eight panels depicting the cathedral’s history in bas-relief, and stained glass windows of various Philippine Madonnas. The square fronting the cathedral is Plaza Roma, formerly known as the Plaza de Armas, where bullfights were staged during the 18th century. Adjacent to the square is the Palacio del Gobernador which used to house the seat of government of the Spanish regime. Four blocks away is the San Agustin Church and Museum. The original structure of bamboo and nipa on this site was the first church in Intramuros. Adjoining the church is a monastery-museum which contains a vast collection of Philippine artifacts and religious art amassed by the Augustinians. Across the street is Casa Manila, a reconstructed 19th century mansion replete with 16th to 19th century furniture and furnishings.

MALACAÑANG PALACE

Manila

Considered one of the most historic structures in the Philippines, this colonial mansion by the Pasig River is the official residence of the President of the Republic of the Philippines. It has been witness to numerous challenges that have faced the nation and events that have defined the country’s history. Malacañang Palace has been home to 14 Spanish governor-generals, 13 American civil governors, and 14 Philippine Presidents.

MEDICAL TOURISM

Why wait for the most sought after medical care professionals to reach your land when you can visit them and have them all to yourself? The rising number of satisfied patients who visit the country for medical reasons indicate that they find assurance and comfort in the capability and pampering that only Filipino doctors, nurses and therapists can offer at half the price back home.
MUELLE DEL RIO
This promenade straddles the southern bank of the Pasig River marking the area where the historic "Galleon Trade" started and flourished. Several notable restauranteurs have big umbrellas and tents serving popular delicacies. The northern embankment is a well-lighted promenade with sidewalk cafes and flea market stalls.

PEOPLE POWER MONUMENT
Epifanio Delos Santos Avenue (EDSA)
A gift of the Filipino to the world --- the miracle that was "EDSA" inspired other freedom-loving people in Germany and the Soviet Union to replicate the feat of conquering hate and oppression with kindness and love --- tearing down the infamous Berlin wall and uniting Germany while dividing the Soviet Union into several free states. People Power continues to bring democracy to oppressed states the world over. The EDSA Shrine and People Power Monument, along Epifanio Delos Santos Avenue (EDSA) cor. Ortigas Avenue and cor. White Plains Avenue respectively, are dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary and those who bravely risked their lives during the 1986 People Power Revolution which ousted a dictatorship. The church and image were erected at the very site where ordinary people stopped mighty military tanks with simple rosary beads, prayers and flowers.

PLAZA MIRANDA
Quiapo, Manila
The plaza is the showcase of the city-wide urban renewal and pedestrianization. It transforms an erstwhile chaotic place into well-appointed open areas for political, social, and cultural events. Artistic arches and landmarks provide an appropriate perimeter for the public as they segregate areas for organized street vending and better access to a wide variety of bargains: cameras, videos, photo supplies, religious items, electronic equipment, musical instruments, etc. The historic plaza leads to the Quiapo Church, known as the Basilica of the Black Nazarene, where devotees fill up every available space for their Friday novenas.

QUIAPOP CHURCH (MINOR BASILICA OF THE BLACK NAZARENE)
Quiapo, Manila
One of Manila’s most famous churches, the St. John the Baptist Parish Church or Quiapo Church is home to the 400 year old image of the Black Nazarene. The miraculous image was brought to the Philippines by the Recollect missionaries from Acapulco, Mexico in 1606. From Bagumbayan (Luneta), it was transferred to Intramuros, then finally to Quiapo. This transfer is commemorated every January 9 when millions of barefoot devotees join the procession as a form of penance for sins committed and of thanksgiving for blessings received. The image leaves the church at 2 p.m. and slowly inches its way through a traditional route while being besieged by millions of devotees who take turns clambering up the ardas (carriage) to touch the image, and, pulling the rope (pingga) as a fulfillment of their annual panata (solemn promise). A second procession is also held every Good Friday to commemorate Christ’s Passion. Around the church is a fascinating gathering of vendors selling candles and curiosities like amulets and folk cures for obscure ailments. The present cream-colored edifice was built after the original Mexican Baroque structure burned to the ground in 1928.
REMEDIOS CIRCLE
Malate, Manila
Barhop and experience romantic dinners, artsy exhibits, hip street parties, and a round of beer all in one night. Bohemian in character, the Remedios Circle and the Malate entertainment district is a favorite of artists and creative professionals. Other popular entertainment spots have come and gone but Malate has always withstood the shifting preferences of several generations who ultimately find themselves back in their old hangouts in this western part of the metropolis.

RIZAL PARK / RIZAL MONUMENT
Roxas Boulevard, Manila
The Rizal National Park is a “people’s park” and is a favorite of people from all walks of life. They come here to stroll, laze around, exercise, skate, and to spend quality time with loved ones. It has an area of 58 hectares which stretches from Taft Avenue up to the walls of the famous Manila Bay. Known as Bagumbayan (meaning “new town”) during the Spanish era, it is where the Filipino-Muslims took refuge after the Spaniards occupied Intramuros in 1571. Later, it was called Luneta ("little moon"). In 1902, Daniel Burnham, architect and city planner, envisioned it as the site of the American government center. The 3 buildings constructed now house The Executive House, the Department of Tourism and the Department of Finance. The park’s most prominent landmark is the Rizal Monument named after the country’s national hero, Dr. Jose P. Rizal. Visiting heads of states and dignitaries lay a wreath of flowers here as part of their itinerary. The Quirino Grandstand is across the famed Roxas Boulevard and is the site of the country’s Independence Day parades and occasional concerts.

THE UNIQUE ICONS OF LAS PIÑAS
Las Piñas City
Las Piñas has always been known for its world famous Bamboo Organ and annual festival where international artists have performed. This unique instrument made in 1822 can only be found inside the St. Joseph Church where it can be viewed from 2-4 p.m. on weekdays and its melodious sound heard every Sunday. But this rare musical instrument is not the only unique attraction of the city. It also boasts of the Nature Church which is one-of-a-kind in its use of tree stumps for seats, native anahaw leaves for roofing and narra hardwood for the altar. This Catholic church made out of indigenous materials is built on a 4,000 square meter mango orchard and tastefully designed by renowned architect, Bobby Manosa.

WORLD’S BIGGEST SHOE
Riverbanks, Marikina City
Marikina is known as the shoe capital of the country and is home to the World’s Biggest Shoe as certified by the Guinness Book of World Records. Want to order handmade shoes crafted at the homes of the shoemakers? Or, customized shoes made while you wait at one of the modern factories? While you’re at it, why not visit the Shoe Museum where the former First Lady Imelda Marcos’ famous collection is on display? Experience all these in the eastern part of the metropolis touted as the country’s “Little Singapore”. Voted several times as a Most Competitive City, Marikina is also acclaimed for its best practices in governance and for transforming a biologically dead river into a revitalized and award winning Riverpark that stretches along both sides of the 11-kilometer long Marikina River and features jogging lanes, shopping centers, rows of dining and entertainment establishments, a Chinese pagoda, sports facilities, picnic grounds, and a flea market.

Entrance Fees: Free Admission

The Archdiocesan Museum of Manila (occupying an area of 350 square meters) was established in 1987 to house the various historical and artistic objects acquired by the Archdiocese of Manila through the years. The museum presents a good picture of the establishment and development of the Archdiocese of Manila. Among the items on exhibit are the colossal wood carvings of the four evangelists that originally adorned the façade of the Manila Cathedral and which survived the bombing of Intramuros during the liberation of Manila.

Also displayed are facsimiles of books written by the early missionaries who became masters of the dialects of the natives they evangelized, among them: Juan de Plascencia’s Doctrina Christiana written in 1593, reproductions of the illustrations found in the Anales Eclesiasticas de Filipinas which is a handwritten record of the history of the Church from 1572 to 1682 and other historical objects, paintings and religious art works.

Children P275

The rich tapestry of Philippine history is chronicled through the sixty handcrafted dioramas which form the core of Ayala Museum’s historical collection. The museum features a one-of-a-kind Boat Gallery showcasing miniatures of different watercrafts that plied the Philippine seas and contributed to the development of Philippine Maritime Trade and the colonial economy.

Also featured are fine art collections of three important painters considered as pioneers of Philippine Art: Juan Luna (1857-1899), Fernando Amorsolo (1882-1972), and Fernando Zobel (1924-1984).

Ayala Museum also organizes exhibitions of contemporary art from various museums and collectors. The museum regularly holds international conferences and intimate gallery talks by local and foreign museum curators, conservators and scholars focusing on specific aspects of the collections and special exhibitions.

Ayala Museum also offers a variety of programs for children and adults, including story-telling and story book publication, art workshops and gallery discussions that are based on either special exhibitions or the permanent collections.

In every aspect of Philippine life, in every phase of Philippine history, in its culture and tradition, language and songs, in everything Filipino, there throb a Chinese presence which found its way long before Philippine recorded history. Although political, economic or cultural exigencies throughout Philippine history sometimes isolate the Chinese Filipinos from a destiny shared with Filipinos, in the end, in everything that is Philippine, there emerges the Tsonoy—the Chinese, who is Filipino or the Filipino who is Chinese; molded through the centuries by Philippine life; enriching this land with the legacies of Chinese heritage.

Bahay Tsonoy is a permanent showcase of the historical and cultural legacies of the Chinese in the Philippines from pre-history to the present. The museum takes you through the saga of the Chinese Filipinos as their identities in these islands transform and evolve from merchant sailors, to immigrant laborers, to mestizos, to ilustrados, to revolutionaries and to Tsonoy— continuing to help build this nation.

The Cultural Center of the Philippines (CCP) Museo ng Kalinangan Pilipino was established in 1988 to help pursue CCP’s aim to define and evolve Philippine art and culture with a museum that can be called “national”, because it represents the various artistic traditions of the country and, “Filipino”, because it embodies the way of life and distinct identity of the Filipino people.

The Museo’s thematic exhibition entitled Diva: Buhay, Ritual at Sining (Spirit: Life, Ritual Art) presents a variety of creative forms of expression arising from the people’s traditions and worldviews. Such traditions and worldviews were molded by their struggle with the elements: land, water, their struggle with life and death, their dealings with their kin and community, and relationship with the divinity.

On exhibition are: textiles, weapons, personal ornaments, farming implements, ritual paraphernalia and more. Adjacent to this is CCP’s Exhibition of Asian Traditional Musical Instruments featuring items from different Asian countries like Indonesia, India, Japan, China, Thailand and Korea.

The Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) Museum of Art was established in April 1996. Its creation is a tribute to the creative endeavors of the contemporary Filipino. Its vision is to help define the growth and glorious flowing of Philippine Visual Arts. The museum functions not only as an exhibition space but as an educational technology as well.

The museum houses the permanent exhibitions of the GSIS Art Collection consisting of artworks done by Fernando Amorsolo, Vicente Manansala, HR Ocampo, Federico Alcuaz, Carlos Francisco and other national artists. It also has monthly changing exhibitions featuring works of new artists and other cultural themes. It is the only museum in the Philippines that holds the largest collection of big tapestries done by Francisco Alcuaz. Likewise in 2002, the GSIS acquired the painting “Parisian Life” of Juan Luna which became the icon of the museum.

The Lopez Memorial Museum (LMM) is the only private museum in the country which affords public access to works by 19th century Filipino Painters Juan Luna y Novicio, Felix Resurreccion Hidalgo alongside representative pieces of National Artists Napoleon Abueva, Fernando Amorsolo, Benedicto Cabrera, Victorio Edades, Carlos Francisco, Jose Joya, Ang Kiukok, Cesar Legaspi, Arturo Luz, Vicente Manansala, Jerry Elizalde Navarro, and Herno Ocampo among many other significant modernist and contemporary artists.

The museum has aggressively opened up its visual art collection to conversations with emergent voices in the Philippine Art scene, inviting audiences to its physically remade and more dynamic exhibition spaces that increasingly house interdisciplinary and multimedia exhibits.

The LMM, which is a 46 year old institution, is also home to Don Eugenio Lopez, Sr.’s personal collection of rare Filippiniana books, manuscripts, maps, archaeological artifacts, rare letters and other personal effects of the revered nationalist hero, Jose Rizal. Countless Filipino scholars began their spadework in LMM’s library archive of over 19,000 Filippiniana titles which include rare Philippine imprints dating from early 17th century, rare works by eminent printers Tomas Pinpin, Raymundo Magysa, Nicolas Cruz Bagay, Laureano Atías and Juan Correa, among others. This venerable trove of information has consistently been built up through new acquisitions of publications and manuscripts from the Spanish, American, Japanese and postwar periods as complemented by the precious photo archives of the now defunct Manila Chronicle and The Tribune.

The UST Museum, the oldest museum in the country, was formally founded in 1871 by Fr. Ramon Martinez Vigil, O.P., a professor of Natural History, but its Natural History collection dates back as early as 1682.

The UST Museum contains a vast collection of artifacts and objects of great historical, cultural and educational value. At present, its collection covers four areas of academic discipline: natural history, ethnology, archaeology and art.
General Description

It's the best beach destination in the world. Earthly paradise. Tropical heaven. These describe the small but astonishingly beautiful island called Boracay.

Located on the northwestern end of Panay Island, Boracay is a dumbbell-shaped island that is only seven kilometers long and one kilometer wide at its narrowest tip. The terrain of this 1,083 hectare-island is fairly flat with its highest point at a mere 100 meters, with beaches fringed with coconut trees, tropical palms and flowering plants, its hills covered with coconut grove, lush vegetation of shrubs, wild vines, and trees barely camouflaging caves inhabited by bats.

Boracay's tours de force are its beaches – there are 30 of them – ranging from an almost four-kilometer stretch of white powdery sand that does not burn under the blazing sun, to a kilometer-long beach of gold sand speckled with tiny puka shells, and to largely untamed and less visited strips that ardent windsurfers favor because of sweeping winds. These beaches are dotted with more than 200 resorts, hotels, and many restaurants and bars offering culinary fare as diverse as the nationalities of the island visitors: American, French, Chinese, Australian, Belgian, German, Spanish, Italian, Greek, Japanese, Korean and Thai and, of course, the native cuisine.

Boracay is paradise for certified sun-worshippers all over the world. In fact, local and foreign tourists have made Boracay their yearly destination while others have chosen to live in this tropical island haven to do nothing but dip in its crystal clear waters that change colors from shimmering blue to deep emerald to the bright yellow-orange-red-and-violet hues of sunset; or walk around very leisurely and try making footprints on the white powdery sand; or, with some cocktails, a glass of wine in hand, stroll on moonlit nights to watch the glimmering sea.

There is also time for adventures at sea, exploring any or all of the 20 official dive sites in and around the island, go kayaking, speed sailing or longboard cruising and for harnessing the wind by wind surfing and parachuting. There are plenty to do on land, too, like trekking, mountain or motor biking, exploring caves, horseback riding or golfing.

Then, after all the physical activities, it is time to give in to the worldly pleasures derived only from a well-appointed spa or even from the masseurs all ready to give a good rub right there on the beach.

Nightlife? No problem in Boracay. From dusk to dawn, the island turns into one big party place where everyone is welcome to join in the fun!
How to get there

By Air

Boracay Island is easily accessible as there are two domestic airports in the towns of Caticlan and Kalibo, both located on the mainland of Panay. The usual routes are:

- Manila-Caticlan-Boracay (1 1/2 hours total travel time)
- Manila-Kalibo-Caticlan-Boracay (3 hours total travel time)
- Cebu-Caticlan-Boracay (1 1/2 hours total travel time)

Two airline companies, Asian Spirit (www.asianspirit.com) and Seair (www.flyseair.com), offer numerous daily flights from Manila or Cebu to Caticlan. Flying time is about one hour and 10 minutes. Both airlines accept online bookings on their websites.

 Philippine Airlines (www.philippineairlines.com) and Cebu Pacific (www.cebupacificair.com) fly the Manila-Kalibo-Manila route. The flight is one hour long. From Kalibo Airport, a shuttle bus will take visitors through a 90-minute scenic journey through the Aklan province countryside to the Caticlan jetty port.

At Caticlan Airport, tricycles (motorcycles with sidecars) can take visitors to the Caticlan jetty port, only 5 minutes away. From the Caticlan jetty port, Boracay is only a short 20-minute boat ride.

By Land

From Iloilo or Bacolod in neighboring Negros Island, the only way to get to Boracay is by bus. Mini-vans or buses ply the four (4) to five (5) hour Iloilo-Caticlan route. The trip is split into two (2): a 3 to 4-hour drive from Iloilo to Kalibo, and, transferring to another vehicle, from Kalibo to Caticlan, for a one-and-a-half-hour drive. A non-stop 3 to 4-hour taxi ride from Iloilo to Caticlan is always an option.
Tourist Attractions

BEACHES/WHITE BEACH
Boracay boasts of a sugary white sand beach and azure blue waters. The best part of the island is the four-kilometer White Beach known to be the “finest beach in the world.” The surrounding water is shallow and the sand is finer and brighter than most beaches in the archipelago.

BAT CAVES
Just northeast of Yapak are bat caves with opulence of cave bats, flying foxes, and giant fruit bats with a wingspan of up to four feet. Spelunkers and adventure seekers will definitely enjoy exploring the caves, truly one of the must-do activities to complete your Boracay adventure.

CROCODILE ISLAND
From a distance, this small uninhabited island looks like the head of a crocodile. Currents can be fierce except at slack tide, which makes for a beautiful collection of corals. It is gently sloping wall with several canyons and caves containing a wide diversity of fish.

KINGFISHER’S FARM
Kingfisher’s Farm is the only theme park on the island that boasts of an abundance of birds, mangroves, coves and natural panoramic view perfect for tourists who want to enjoy a quiet vacation. Experience the “fish and grill” barbecue party or simply fun picnic for the family when in the island.

MAMBO NUMBER 5
For the adventure-driven, “Mambo Number 5” is a little bit of boating and wind surfing, a little bit of scuba diving, a little bit of trekking, a little bit of mountain biking, and a little bit of golf.

MOUNT LUHO
The highest elevation in Boracay at 100 meters, Mount Luho can be reached by hiking, mountain biking or motor biking. Atop the mountain is a little kiosk where guests can take a break after a tiring uphill trip while enjoying the breathtaking view of the entire Bolabog Beach.

SUNKEN FOREST
It is also known as Dead Forest as a result of the devastation left by a strong typhoon a decade ago. Sunken Forest is still a picturesque sight in the south end of Bolabog Beach, radiating with romance and inspiration for nature lovers. Best time to go there is during sunset or sunrise.
Special Interest

NATURE TRIPPING/ECO-ADVENTURE
World-renowned Boracay is an adventure island ideal for island hopping, trekking, caving, mountain climbing, biking and horseback riding. Trekking and mountain biking can bring even the intrepid to the island’s quaint interior villages and to the edges’ scenic rocky cliffs, discovering along the way many hidden coves with isolated beaches far from the tourist crowd.

TIBIAO WHITETRIVER RIVER
Rising near the peak of Mt. Madja-as, the Tibiao River is almost 2000 meters on its short but tumultuous journey to the sea. The lower section of the river, known as the “Chicken Run”, is grade 3; the more difficult upper section reaches grade 4. The Tibiao has all the classic features of a tropical whitewater river, with rich vegetation hemming the banks, views of rice terraces, spectacular falls and clear water. The river is close to Boracay and easily accessible.

DIVING
Dive sites surround the island and are learning venues to both novice and professional divers, guided by competent instructors from the many dive shops that operate in the area.

Yapak Wall
Yapak 1 and 2 are actually two separate walls that begin at 30 meters and drop down to 70 meters. The most famous of Boracay’s dive sites, close encounters with white tip and grey reef sharks, dogtooth tuna, groupers, napoleon wrasses and giant trevallies are common. Surface conditions can be rough, and therefore a negative entry is often required, followed by a spectacular blue-water descent.

Friday’s Rock
A dive at Friday’s can actually cover two dive sites: Friday’s Reef which is 7 to 12 meters, and Friday’s Rock which is 12 to 18 meters. This famous fish-feeding station is a large boulder that provides photographers a chance to capture close-up shots of emperors, triggerfish, red bass, scorpion fish and surgeons.

AQUASPORTS
The island paradise of Boracay is a perfect place for watersports. Here, visitors can choose from a smorgasbord of exhilarating aqua action – from swimming and snorkeling to scuba diving, windsurfing, sailboating, kayaking, boardsailing and boating.

Boat Sailing
Sailboating and kayaking are popular sporting activities, with Boracay playing host to the annual Paraw Regatta, an international sailboat race that makes use of the native outrigger.
Boardsailing

The picture-perfect tropical island of Boracay offers flat-water speed sailing, wave jumping and longboard cruising. White Beach, shielded from the “amihan”, or northwest monsoon, is for beginners. Bulabog Beach, on the other side of the island, has ideal conditions for speed, slalom, and high-wind shortboard sailing. It is also the site of the annual Boracay International Funboard Cup. Tabon Strait has superb high-performance sailing, but there is a real risk of being swept away, so this site is for skilled sailors only.

Donsol, a fishing town in Sorsogon province, serves as a sanctuary to a group of 40 whale sharks (Rhincodon typus), which are considered as the largest fish in the world, measuring between 18 to 35 feet in length and weighing about 20 tons. Locally known as “butanding”, whale sharks visit the waters of Donsol from November to May. They travel across the oceans but nowhere else have they been sighted in a larger group than in the waters of Sorsogon.
Philippine Cockatoo
The Philippines is home to some of the world’s most exotic birds. One of the most endangered species is the exotic Kalangay or the Philippine cockatoo (Cacatua haematuropygia), which belongs to Psittacidae or the family of parrots. Some cockatoos can live up to 50 years. They are known for mimicking human voices. Most of them measure 33 centimeters in length and weigh 0.29 kilogram.

World’s Smallest Hoofed Mammal
The Philippine mouse deer, the world’s smallest hoofed mammal, is found only in the Balabac Islands, south of Palawan. Locally known as Pilandok (Tragulus rignicens), this ruminant stands only about 40 centimeters at the shoulder level.

Flying Lemur
Flying Lemur, one of the most distinct creatures on earth lives in the Philippines. It does not have wings but it can glide across 100 meters of space in a single leap. Like the lemurs of Asia, it moves around at night. Its head resembles that of a dog while its body has similarities with the flying squirrel of Canada. In Mindanao, people call it “kagwang”. Around the world, it is known as colugo or the flying lemur.

Palawan Bear Cat
Palawan bearcat is neither a bear nor a cat. Known in Southeast Asia as binturong, the bearcat is a species of its own, with population in the forests of Palawan, Borneo, Burma and Vietnam. It belongs to the family of Viverridae (civets). The Palawan bearcat has a long body and a pointed face leading to the nose. Its head and body measure 61 to 96 centimeters in combined length while its tail is almost as long. It weighs 9 to 14 kilograms and lives up to 20 years.

Calamian Deer
Calamian Islands, north of Palawan province, is home to a species of deer that cannot be found elsewhere. Scientists referred to the hog deer in the islands as Calamian deer in order to distinguish them from other hog deer in the world. An ordinary Calamian deer measures 105 to 115 centimeters in length and 60 to 65 centimeters high at the shoulder and weighs about 36 to 50 kilograms. It is said to have longer and darker legs, compared with other hog deer.

Second Largest Bird in the Planet
The monkey-eating PHILIPPINE EAGLE is the second largest bird on the planet (next only to the American Condor).
Tubbataha Reef National Marine Park

Location: Middle of the Sulu Sea, 181 kilometers southeast of Puerto Princesa, Palawan inscribed in the UNESCO World Heritage Sites in 1993

The Tubbataha Reef Marine Park covers 33,200 hectares including the north and south reefs. It is a marvelous marine wilderness and a special ecosystem much appreciated for its beauty as well as its scientific value.

It is a unique example of an atoll reef with a very high density of marine species, with 80% coral cover of 46 coral genres and 376 fish species. The site is an excellent example of a pristine coral reef with a spectacular 100-meter perpendicular wall, extensive lagoons and two-coral islands.

Tubbataha's north islet is a nesting site for sea birds of all kinds and endangered hawksbill sea turtles; a diver's paradise with gorgonian seafans, soft corals, and gigantic sea sponges serving as home to turkey fish, anemone crab, banded seasnakes, nudibranchs, starfish, catsharks, surgeon fish, bat fish, and butterfly fish. The rare, unusual-looking fox-faced rabbit fish can also be found in the marine park. Marine turtles, including the critically endangered hawksbill and green turtle, nest on some of the beaches.

Puerto Princesa Subterranean River National Park

Location: Saint Paul Mountain Range on the northern coast of Palawan inscribed in the UNESCO World Heritage Sites in 1999

The Puerto Princesa Subterranean River National Park features a spectacular limestone karst landscape with its underground river. The river is unique because it flows directly into the sea, and its lower portion is subject to tidal influences. The area also represents a significant habitat for biodiversity conservation. The site contains a whole ecosystem --- from mountain to the sea; and protects forests, which are among the most significant in Asia.

A highlight of each visit is a ride through its 8 km-long underground river which runs through a dome of stalactites complemented by stalagmites running the entire length of the cave.

The park is a popular destination for bird watching and is known for regular sightings of threatened bird species of Palawan peacock-peasant and Philippine cockatoo and the endemic birds Palawan scopsowl, swiftlet, hornbill, flyeater and blue flycatcher, tit and flowerpecker. It is blessed to have the Palawan flying fox, Oriental small-clawed otter, stinkbadger, binturong, flying squirrel, mountain tree squirrel and porcupine.

The park also features an exciting Monkey Trail with its series of wooden paths to the forest.
Rice Terraces of the Philippine Cordilleras
Location: Ifugao
Inscribed in the UNESCO World Heritage Sites in 1995

The 2,000-year old Banaue Rice Terraces – the most extensive anywhere in the world - were carved into the mountains of Ifugao by ancestors of the Batad indigenous people. The terraces are located approximately 1,500 meters (5,000 feet) above sea level and cover 10,360 square kilometers (about 4,000 square miles) of the mountainside.

Known as the “eighth wonder of the world”, the terraces were carved with only simple tools and bare hands. They are fed by an ancient irrigation system, an ingenious complex of bamboo pipes and canals, drawing water from streams created by bubbling springs located in the mountain rainforests.

Considered as a monument to man’s genius in turning a rugged and forbidding terrain into a source of sustenance, the rice terraces stand to be the most awe-inspiring man-made landscape in the Cordilleras. They are also invariably called “The Stairway to the Sky.”

Historic Town of Vigan
Location: Vigan, Ilocos Sur
Inscribed in the UNESCO World Heritage Sites in 1999

The 16th century town of Vigan is “an exceptionally intact and well-preserved example of a European trading town in East and East Asia”. Its architecture reflects the fusion of cultural elements from the Philippines, China and Europe, resulting in a culture and townscape that has no parallel anywhere in East and Southeast Asia.

Seemingly impervious to time, spared from rebellion and the ravages of war, Vigan has remained unchanged and its many preserved historic sites – more than 180 edifices – make it look like “a piece of Spain.” With its grand cathedral, massive mansions with red-tile roofs and spacious balconies, narrow cobblestone streets, horse drawn carriages, and friendly faces peering out of large windows, Vigan is a place where “time stood still”.

San Agustin Church
in Intramuros, Manila

Built in 1587, the San Agustin Church is the oldest stone church in the Philippines, the only one that remains as the original evidence of the 16th-century Spanish architecture. It has defied several earthquakes and the heavy shelling of both Japanese and American forces in 1945 and now stands as a reminder of the grandeur of the past.

As the best-preserved example of an urban ecclesiastical complex in the Philippines, the compound serves not only as a historical document of the Spanish colonial heritage but also as a repository of the most important works of art and literature of the period.

Miag-ao Church in Iloilo

Built in yellow-orange sandstone, the large fortress-church of Miag-ao was completed in 1797. It served as a fortress against raids of marauding Moro pirates.

The church is amazingly beautiful because of its two asymmetric pyramidal towers and its finely sculptured, yellow sandstone facade. Its facade’s carving is the pinnacle of Filipino naive art, in which craftsmen abandon all restraints to interpret Western decorative styles in the local folk idiom. The central element in the facade is Saint Christopher, clad like a Filipino farmer with rolled-up trousers. He carries the Christ Child on his back while holding on to a lush coconut tree for support. Beside him are guava and papaya trees, flanked by ornamental urns. The scene merges Western Catholic iconography with a folk interpretation of coastal Iloilo countryside.

The structural design of the church is extraordinary. It boasts of the only example in the country of a barrel vault, dome, and arched vestibules supporting its choir loft, all made of stone. Its facade is notable for its two pairs of columns—the lowest pair in Corinthian style, the upper pair in Doric style, topped by a pediment surrounded by a Cross. The main door, carved out of Philippine molave, has a bas-relief of St. Augustine and his mother, Santa Monica. San Agustin Church represents the art and technology of Spanish, Chinese and native cultures fused together “to suit human sentiments and faiths that found expression in customs and traditions that were evolved through the centuries.”
San Agustin Church in Paoay, Ilocos Norte

Paoay's San Agustin Church, built in 1604, is one of the most outstanding variants of "earthquake baroque" in the Philippines, where the primary consideration was to design the structure for earthquake protection.

The façade of San Agustin Church is astounding but its most prominent feature is the phalanx of buttresses that juts out perpendicularly from the sidewalls, purposely to strengthen the walls and the entire structure - against earthquake damage. Fourteen massive S-shaped buttresses rise in rhythmic cadence from the ground to the roofline.

The church is an eye-catcher as it emerges from a beautiful open space, unlike many other churches located within urban settings.

Nuestra Señora de la Asuncion in Santa Maria, Ilocos Sur

The Church of Nuestra Señora de la Asuncion in Santa Maria is unique for its utter disregard for the traditional Spanish urban plan of constructing the church to face the plaza, and less imposing religious and official buildings grouped around. It also has a citadel appearance as the church, with its convent and bell tower, stands alone on the crown of a solitary hill encircled by a stonewall, with stone stairways leading to the church.

It is the only church in the Philippines exuding the ambience of a Mediterranean hill town with its convent built parallel to the church façade and its bell tower detached from the main church. Evoking a Chinese pagoda, the bell tower of octagonal shapes of decreasing diameter is crowned by a small dome, tapering to the sky with an oriental grace.
