The diagram compares the pain intensity judgments of non-expert humans, expert humans, and computers across different image numbers. The y-axis represents pain intensity, while the x-axis shows the image numbers. Each category is represented by a different color: non-expert humans in light gray, expert humans in dark gray, and computers in black. The data shows varying levels of pain intensity across the images, with some images having high pain intensity judgments from all categories.